DETAILED ACTION

Claim Rejections - 35 USC § 103

1. The following is a quotation of 35 U.S.C. 103(a) which forms the basis for all obviousness rejections set forth in this Office action:

(a) A patent may not be obtained though the invention is not identically disclosed or described as set forth in section 102 of this title, if the differences between the subject matter sought to be patented and the prior art are such that the subject matter as a whole would have been obvious at the time the invention was made to a person having ordinary skill in the art to which said subject matter pertains. Patentability shall not be negated by the manner in which the invention was made.

2. Claims 1-2, 5-6 are rejected under 35 U.S.C. 103(a) as being unpatentable over Eromaki et al. (U.S. Patent No. 6,748,249).

Regarding claims 1 and 6, Eromaki et al. teaches a portable digital communication device comprising: a main housing provided with a display unit (e.g., DPL1 – see figures 2, 4-5) on a top surface thereof; a first key pad (e.g., KB1 – see figures 2, 5) being capable of sliding on the top surface of the main housing in a first direction relative to the display unit so as to open and close a first side of the display unit; and a lid (e.g., SL2) being capable of sliding on the top surface of the main housing in a second direction relative to the display unit so as to open and close a second side of the display unit and being capable of sliding toward and away from the first key pad. Eromaki et al. does not teach that the second lid includes a keyboard. However, it would have been obvious to one having ordinary skill in the art at the time the invention was made to include a keyboard on the second lid in order to have space for more functional keys or to transfer some of the keys from KB1 to the SL2 so that the keys can be made bigger for user convenience.

Art Unit: 2681

Regarding claim 2, Eromaki et al. teaches the portable digital communication device according to claim 1, wherein the display unit is located in an intermediate portion of the top surface of the main housing (see figures 2-12).

Regarding claim 5, Eromaki et al. teaches the portable digital communication device according to claim 1, wherein the first key pad further comprises a microphone on the top surface thereof, and the second key pad is provided with a speaker on the top surface thereof (see column 2, lines 56-58).

3. Claim 3 is rejected under 35 U.S.C. 103(a) as being unpatentable over Eromaki et al. (U.S. Patent No. 6,748,249) in view of Humphreys et al. (US 2003/0143961 A1).

Regarding claim 3, Eromaki et al. teaches the claimed invention except the main housing comprises: at least one functional key located on a side surface thereof; a headphone jack and a volume adjusting button mounted on a side surface thereof; and a battery pack disposed on a bottom surface thereof. However, the preceding limitations are taught in Humphreys et al. (see figure 1 and paragraphs [0028], [0029]). It would have been obvious to one having ordinary skill in the art at the time the invention was made to apply the teaching of Humphreys et al. to the teaching of Eromaki et al. in order to save space on the top and bottom surface for other functional keys.

Allowable Subject Matter

4. Claim 4 is objected to as being dependent upon a rejected base claim, but would be allowable if rewritten in independent form including all of the limitations of the base claim and any intervening claims.

Art Unit: 2681

Regarding claim 4, Miyake et al. (US 2002/0065102 A1) teaches a portable telephone that has a cylindrical lens housing and a shutter, the cylindrical lens housing having a camera (paragraphs [0049], [0056]). However, Eromaki et al., Humphreys et al., and Miyake et al., either singularly or in combination, fail to teach that the cylindrical lens housing having a camera lens exposed between a side surface of the main housing and a bottom surface of the main housing, the main housing having a rotation axis which is parallel to and spaced a predetermined distance from a virtual plane on which the first and second key pads linearly move, the camera lens being rotatably mounted between the side surface and the bottom surface.
